

PH.D. CANDIDATES

2019-2020

December 2019

Dear Colleagues:

With great pride I introduce to you the recent and upcoming Ph.D. graduates of the Columbia School of Social Work.

Since its inception in 1950, the doctoral program at Columbia School of Social Work has provided a rigorous educational platform of study and research in an unparalleled learning environment. As you will see from their bios, this year's graduates are highly accomplished and exemplify the Columbia standards of excellence.

You will find contact information for each graduate on their CV. If you would like to discuss our program or the preparation of particular students, please do not hesitate to contact me at ca2543@columbia.edu or at (212) 851-2385.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'C. Alcántara', with a large, stylized flourish on the left side.

Carmela Alcántara, Ph.D.

RESEARCH PROGRAM

My research program focuses on the social determinants of health and the impact of social policies on health and health inequalities. In particular, my research examines the large and growing inequalities in health across income and geographic areas within the United States (U.S.). I am interested in the role of social policies in protecting—or worsening—the health of low-income populations in the U.S., with a focus on examining whether U.S. state policies contribute to widening health inequalities.

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Research

- December 2018 – July 2019 Senior Research Consultant
World Health Organization (WHO): Phnom Penh, Cambodia
- Provided strategic guidance and technical support for research and policy to the WHO Cambodia Office and the Cambodia Ministry of Health and its research arm the National Institute of Public Health.
 - Led the conceptualization and execution of research to measure and track health inequalities across Cambodia and identify governance structures and evidence-based policies to close identified health gaps.
 - Conducted extensive literature reviews on health inequality monitoring and evidence-based policies to achieve health equity, facilitated key stakeholder and expert interviews across WHO programs and government and partner agencies, and collected and statistically analyzed national survey data on health and social determinants of health.
 - Authored WHO publications, which present the state of health equity in Cambodia—across a wide selection of health outcomes and social determinants of health measures and dimensions of equity— and describes multi-sector institutional mechanisms and evidence-based policies to advance health equity across the country.

August 2017 – December 2018 Senior Research Consultant

U.S. Health and Human Services (HHS), Office of Minority Health (OMH): Rockville, Maryland.

–Oversaw the development, review, and dissemination of research, peer reviewed publications, blogs, newsletters, and other communications products for the U.S. HHS OMH and its initiative, the National Partnership for Action to End Health Disparities (NPA), a partnership based, multi-sector approach to addressing health disparities across the U.S.

June 2016 – August 2017 Senior Research Associate

Center for Health Innovation, New York Academy of Medicine: New York, New York.

–Spearheaded efforts to integrate the social determinants of health into the Center’s research portfolio, overseeing research and analysis of quantitative and qualitative data from national health and social surveys to examine the impacts of the social determinants of health on health care access and health outcomes and to estimate the effects of evidence-based social policies on improving population health and health equity.

–Authored publications, including peer-reviewed journal articles, reports, data and policy briefs, and blog posts.

–Drafted, reviewed, and submitted grant proposals, including to the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and the National Institutes of Health.

June 2015 – June 2016 Graduate Research Assistant

Department of Political Science, University of Pennsylvania; Department of Anesthesiology and Critical Care, Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania: Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

–Executed research, statistical analysis, and writing for peer-reviewed journal articles and other publications on the politics of health inequalities and public opinion of inequalities in income, education, and health care in the US and Europe.

September 2013 – June 2015 Graduate Research Assistant

Columbia Population Research Center (CPRC), Columbia University School of Social Work: New York, New York.

–Provided research support to faculty for multiple CPRC studies, including the: (1) Poverty Tracker, a long-term study of well-being and disadvantage in New York City funded by the Robin Hood Foundation; (2) Oregon Health Insurance Experiment (OHIE) studying the effect of expanding Medicaid insurance coverage to low-income adults; and (3) Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF) funded study evaluating the health and socioeconomic impacts of early elective caesarian sections on health outcomes and health care costs.

March 2011 – June 2013 Senior Research Associate

The Commonwealth Fund: New York, New York.

–Provided research and programmatic support to the Executive Vice President for Programs and other senior program staff with a focus on vulnerable populations.

–Executed research and analysis of national surveys and other primary data sources to study the effects of health policies and interventions on health care access, quality, and outcomes for vulnerable populations.

–Informed the design of national surveys and scorecards that assess U.S. health system performance at the national and state levels in meeting the needs of vulnerable populations, including identifying survey questions and selecting scorecard measures.

–Collaborated with senior program staff to author policy reports, issue briefs, scorecards, and other publications to inform health policy-making with a focus on policy solutions that can expand access to affordable, high-quality health care and reduce health disparities for vulnerable populations.

October 2009 – March 2011 Research Associate

Center for Health Care Strategies: Hamilton, New Jersey.

–Provided programmatic support on initiatives and projects that test innovations in publicly financed health care with a focus on delivery system and payment reforms that reward value as opposed to volume and support improvements in population health.

–Conducted policy research on best practices in Medicaid across the nation, focusing on strategies to improve quality of health delivery systems and encourage value-based payment reforms, and authored policy briefs that disseminated findings to a broad national audience, including policy experts and representatives from the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid (CMS), state Medicaid agencies, and Medicaid health plans.

September 2008 – September 2009 Graduate Research Assistant

London School of Economics (LSE) Health: London, United Kingdom.

–Assisted in research, analysis, and writing of publications for the European Commission on incentive mechanisms to encourage research and development (R&D) investment for novel antibiotics and for the European Health Technology Institute for Socio-Economic Research on the socio-economic value of medical technology in Europe.

January 2006 – September 2008 Research Assistant

Department of Political Science, University of Pennsylvania: Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

–Executed research, analysis, and writing on the politics of health inequalities, with a focus on comparing European and American policymakers’ discourse surrounding health inequalities.

DISSERTATION AND RESEARCH PROGRAM

I study migrant populations and social policies concerning migrants to inform structural changes that enhance social and human capital development and reduce health disparities in the context of a global society. I use applied microeconometrics, multilevel modeling, and structural equation modeling for my analyses. I teach classes and organize workshops on immigration, social policy, program development, entrepreneurship, and social documentary filmmaking to further transform and disseminate research findings.

RESEARCH PROGRAM

My research examines psychosocial and ethical dimensions of health and wellbeing, with a focus on the impact of medical interventions on perceptions of embodied selfhood and quality of life. Further contextualizing this work, my interests extend to social justice considerations in population health, including equitable access to health care treatment options and fair allocation of medical resources.
